Businesses still mourn the loss of Poly Royal

Former annual open house was a 'huge part' of local economy

By Silas Lyons
Staff Writer

A row of Poly Royal buttons lies in a small black coffin in the front window of Stan Carpenter's downtown stationary store. Nearby, a black wreath hangs in front of a collection of posters and memorabilia commemorating the bygone event.

"It was inconceivable to me when it was canceled," said Carpenter, a 1982 Cal Poly graduate. "I'd sure like to see a way to keep the Poly Royal tradition alive. It was a win-win situation for Cal Poly and downtown."

Carpenter said the reality of how quickly Poly Royal had begun to fade struck him when a freshman from the College of Business called soliciting donations.

Carpenter told the student he no longer contributed to his alma mater because of his frustration over the cancellation of Poly Royal.

"What's Poly Royal?" the younger man replied.

"It didn't dawn on me how serious this was until (that happened)," Carpenter said. "I decided it was time to really bring back awareness."

Hence the display in the front window of Hills Office Products.

Carpenter's sentiments echo throughout the San Luis Obispo business community, where proponents of Poly Royal cheer new steps being taken to bring it back in some form, and dissenters are hard to find.

"Poly Royal was just a huge, huge part of our business," said Pete Brubeck, owner of Brubeck's, a local bar on Higuera Street.

Brubeck said he felt eliminating the event altogether was an overreaction.

"(When) we've got a broken arm, we don't cut it off. We set it, we fix it," he said.

Jami Kiff, operations coordinator for the Apple Farm restaurant and motel, agreed.

"I know the students really fell down in the face of the city," she said of the 1990 riots. "But they should be given a chance to redeem themselves."

Kiff's involvement with the motel has given her an inside view of the impact of Poly Royal's cancellation upon prospective Cal Poly students.

"We get a lot of people calling and wanting to know when it is, because they want to come up and see Cal Poly," she said.

Kiff said she doesn't like telling customers the event has died. As a 1990 Cal Poly graduate, she said she misses the open house for more than business reasons.

"I think it's just a real disappointment that Cal Poly can't be shown off like it was, because it is such a great school," Kiff said.

The financial concerns, however, also are quite compelling, she said.

"For us, Poly Royal was always like a graduation weekend, where we were sold out weeks in advance," Kiff said. "It definitely impacted our restaurant and our hotel tremendously."

But the enthusiasm toward the positive aspects of a possible Poly Royal revival is tempered by a grudging acknowledgment of the risk involved.

"Somehow, it's got to work for everybody," Brubeck said. "It can't turn into a riot. If more law enforcement has to be brought in so that we don't get into a riot situation, then so be it."

Sponsored by the Liberal Arts Student Council and the Women's Studies Program, "Women in Politics" will feature Ruth Bracket and Evelyn Delany, San Luis Obispo county supervisors; Wendy Nogle, a former county supervisor candidate; Rose Marie Sheetz, former mayor of Morro Bay; Pat Renshaw, former coordinator of the National Organization for Women in San Luis Obispo; and Elisse Moss, head of the San Luis Obispo's Democratic Party office, according to Brent Hultquist, liberal arts student council chair.

The panel discussion will begin at 7 p.m. in the Staff Dining Room, located across from the new Rec Sports building.

"Many people described 1992 as the 'Year of the Woman,' at least in politics on a national level," said Carolyn J. Stefanco, a professor in the history department and director of the Women's Studies Program. "This panel will discuss what it's like being a woman involved in local politics."

Additional topics will include: the press' coverage of Hillary Rodham Clinton; sexual harassment in the workplace; President Clinton's lifting of the gag rule on abortion and the possible end of the Hyde Amendment preventing federal funds for abortions; President Clinton's nominations for Attorney General; and a discussion on Trekking through San Luis Obispo Creek picking up abandoned trash at 7:30 on a Saturday morning doesn't sound like something that would improve a relationship.

But when the relationship is one which some say has love-hate written all over it, anything might help.

In an effort to improve relations between Cal Poly and the city, students and members of the community Saturday morning picked up trash and swept downtown streets in the 10th annual Good Neighbor Day.

But are the relations between Cal Poly and city really getting any better?

A few of the city's officials who participated in Saturday's event said they feel the relationship between the community and students is improving.

San Luis Obispo Mayor Peg Pinard said it was nice to see everyone "pitching in" and doing their part.

"I think the day was a great success," Pinard said. "People were all over town in so many different places. Visibility for the students was great."

City Council Member Allen Settle agreed.

"This event gives the students a good chance to show the people of San Luis Obispo that they want to take an active role in the community," he said.

Settle said a program like Good Neighbor Day brings the students and the community together and promotes the return of Poly Royal.

"I think we are already seeing the return of Poly Royal in these smaller events which are taking place," Pinard said. "I am in support of its return."

However, some Cal Poly students said they don't see the relationship prospering from events like Saturday's.

Eric Oxford, a construction management senior, said that Good Neighbor Day was only "image."

Biology sophomore Amy Burke agreed.

"Students have one good thing one day a year and raise hell the rest of the year," she said.

Burke said she is especially negative toward her neighbors because a party she threw two weeks ago was broken up by 8:15 p.m.

Burke's roommate, Kristen Hewitt, an applied art and design sophomore, also said she was frustrated when their party had to end so early.

"I could understand if it was 10 p.m. because that is when people are going to bed," she said.

Biology junior Trevor Denny said when he was in high school, there was a 10 p.m. curfew. He said it was an agreed upon time, and parties usually didn't get broken up until then. Denny said that a similar curfew might work in San Luis Obispo.

"You know when the curfew is, so when it comes, you can't complain," he said.

David Walch, dean of Library Services and a resident of San Luis Obispo, said he has never experienced a problem with stu-

United States' schools are still at risk ten years later

New York, N.Y.

Like a scolding from the principal to an underachieving pupil, a report released 10 years ago gave poor marks to the nation's schools and urged tougher courses, longer hours and more homework.

Some things have improved since the White House released the 36-page "A Nation at Risk" on April 26, 1983. But educators say they're still waiting for dramatic turnarounds and top-flight schools.

"Our results have been disappointing. I don't think there's any question we're still at risk," said Terrel H. Bell, the former education secretary who empaneled the National Commission on Excellence in Education to write the report.

"Our results have been disappointing. I don't think there's any question we're still at risk."

Terrel H. Bell, Former Education Secretary

"There has been some small progress. But we're still not doing the rigorous course work called for in 'A Nation At Risk.' Our standards and expectations are still not where they should be," said Bell, now an education consultant in Salt Lake City.

The report sounded alarms that shoddy education was undermining America's global leadership in commerce, industry, science and technological innovation. At the time, 35 states required only a single year of mathematics and a single year of science for a high school diploma.

These startling words concluded the report:

"The educational foundations of our society are presently being eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity that threatens our very future as a nation and a people. ... If an unfriendly foreign power had attempted to impose on America the mediocre educational performance that exists today, we might well have viewed it as an act of war."

It was hoped that "A Nation At Risk" would energize school programs the way the Soviet launching of the Sputnik satellite in 1957 boosted the U.S. space effort.

Among its recommendations, the commission urged that high school students take four years of English, three years each of math, science and social science, plus a semester of computer science.

Various state reforms have installed those course loads in 40 percent of the nation's schools, as opposed to 9 percent in 1983. That still means 60 percent are lacking.

Twister rips through Oklahoma
Tulsa, Okla.

National Guardsmen searched for a missing child and residents picked up belongings Sunday along the path of a tornado that killed at least seven, swept vehicles from a highway and smashed homes and businesses.

"This just flattened everything," Gov. David Walters said after seeing the damage in Tulsa and suburban Catoosa.

More than 95 people were treated for injuries ranging from cuts to burns.

The twister toppled a church in Tulsa. In Catoosa, it demolished at least 60 mobile homes, 23 houses and several businesses, Police Chief Benny Dirck said.

Authorities concentrated their search for a 4-year-old boy missing since the tornado hit Saturday night.

"With a missing child, I didn't pay a whole lot of attention to the property damage," Walters said from a demolished truck stop when he was asked about the destruction.

State emergency director Tom Feuerborn called a damage estimate of $100 million "very loose." He said he hoped to have better totals after teams from the state

Workers rally to save jobs

Vallejo, Calif.

Thousands of Mare Island Naval Shipyard workers rallied Saturday in a bid to keep the facility open and save their jobs while Base Closure Commission members toured installations in advance of hearings on their fate.

"This base is a vital military asset for America," Gov. Pete Wilson told thousands of cheering employees at the shipyard, one of the biggest bases targeted in the San Francisco Bay area.

An estimated 32,000 jobs in the region are on the line, but those fighting to keep installations open said their arguments are based on military justification, not economic woes.

"Keeping Mare Island (Naval Shipyard) open is the right thing to do for California and the right thing to do for America," Wilson said in Vallejo. He maintained that closing down the nuclear service installation would leave a gap in defense.

COMMENTARY

Blue moods

By John Hubbell

They're ready to put new movie theaters here in San Luis Obispo, and we'd better move quick to stop them. The thought of more fun here! Just who do these developers think they are?

The plan, if you haven't heard, is to install seven new screens right smack in the middle of our pulsating town.

Just like the kind you'd find in a big city, the theater will have butter-flavored popcorn and big cardboard cutouts of stars in the lobby. It will likely have running water and flushing toilets, too.

This house of ill-repute will rub elbows with a new Gap and Express Limited. That's all right, because Gaps and Limiteds aren't fun. They just sell clothes. No problem there.

But movie theaters are different. You go with a friend or a girlfriend. Your feet stick to the floor inside. You can throw things at the screen. There's often sex and violence and cursing.

So it all begs the question: Why aren't the local citizenry up in arms? The new theaters clearly go against the No Fun Ordinance local lawmakers so vehemently adhere to. We already have yogurt shops and bowling alleys. Another theater? Why, by San Luis Obispo standards, that's practically another bordello! Let's face it: Movie theaters are popular with the youngest of local teens. Before long, they won't want to go to Farmers Market, where parents can cast a watchful eye. "Off to the movies, mom!" they'll say instead — slamming the screen door, skipping off the porch in the summer breeze, arm in arm, drooling with desire and headed for the passion-laden darkness.

With seven new screens in town, rival theaters will be begging for something to show.

First they'll offer more Burt Reynolds movies. Then they'll knock down their prices.

The next step?

Why, pornos, of course!

Look at the potential for violence, too. Cal Poly students are extremely rude in theaters. Once, I went to the movies with Peter Hartlaub — similar to attending a play with Abraham Lincoln, granted. But now that I know my co-worker smuggles malt liquor and Mexican food into matinees, I ask: Should the town give him more places to roam?

Local residents can be a pain, too. Once, at Edwards Cinemas, the talk in a nearby row went something like:

Child: Mommy, what's that?

Mommy: Why, that's a black person, junior.

Child: Black person?

Mommy: Yes, dear. Wesley Snipes.

Child: Waaaaaaah!

This, of course, is meant in good humor. I'm naturally glad to see some retail development in town. Movies and Gaps and Limiteds are good for students. Movies and Gaps and Limiteds may even buy newspaper ads.

I just feel weird about being happy about it, that's all. Like catching yourself waiting with ma and pa for the stagecoach to come to town. I used to be a city slicker-type, you know. Is this what my formerly urban life has come to?

All I know is this: My friend Toni, who was raised in a small Texas town, once told me local officials threw a parade when a Dairy Queen set up shop there.

Then, I laughed. Now I'm beginning to understand how they felt.

Oh well, so be it. Yeehaw! Lights, please.

John Hubbell is Mustang Daily's news editor.

downtown, late at night, in a room together. What if the film breaks? We might get restless. "Free movies! Free movies!" the cry would go forth as we'd spill into the streets.

You can fill in the rest.

If the community gives in to this temptation of indulgence, we can only guess what might be next. A Chuck E. Cheese for the kids? A nightclub for — gasp — the huge, restless under-21 population here? Birth rates could skyrocket. The town could be turned on its ear. Our whole concept of life in San Luis could be shattered. People may flee... to the cities!

Besides, some Poly students

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'This explains a lot'

In regards to the articles in the week of April 19, entitled "Growing Pains," I was repulsed by the image given to drug addicts, and especially drug producers. These articles glamorized the use of illegal drugs, and in some cases condoned criminal behavior.

In particular was the article of how the Cal Poly student learns by doing. Why don't you run an article on how college-educated chemists produce crystal methamphetamines and LSD. Coincidentally, on the same day in a real newspaper, The Wall Street Journal, there was an article describing some pot growers who grew pot for personal consumption and got caught. A 61-year-old former dentist lost his practice and said, "It ruined my life." Formerly making six figures, he now works in a chocolate factory to pay the bills.

In the April 22 issue, you really find out what's wrong with some of the staff at Cal Poly (they're on dope). This explains a lot.

Finally, for all of you pot growers who grow it for personal consumption to avoid the criminal element, think again. You are the criminal element.

Thomas Logan

A pathetic sight

Although I have grown accustomed to the steady flow of liberal nonsense in our school newspaper, last week's articles on the cultivation of marijuana on campus, as well as coverage of the 50th anniversary of the discovery of LSD, were too much even for me.

Mr. Hartlaub's glorification of this country's drug "culture" is the epitome of arrogance and journalistic irresponsibility. Countless numbers of lives have been tragically affected as a result of illegal drug and alcohol use, and the overwhelming amount of crime associated with it.

Whether it is young girls selling themselves as prostitutes in order to support their drug habits, or the LA gangs killing each other (or anyone) to protect their drug trade, the use of illegal drugs is far from an innocent pastime or simply a case of "what one chooses to do with their own body." Marijuana (as well as alcohol abuse) is the stepping-stone to the harder drugs, not to mention that seeing young, potentially fruitful lives stoned (or drunk) off their ass is a pathetic sight.

In the future I dare Mustang Daily to focus its attention on positive and/or constructive topics. How about: Students who work their tails off 60+ hours a week and did not sell pot to put themselves through Poly. That's just one suggestion.

We want our gym!

It's dawn and the sun still hasn't crept over the horizon. Peering into the storefront window, a woman taps her finger on the glass over and over. Repeatedly, in a rhythmic beat, she chants, "OPEN, OPEN, OPEN..."

The intensity builds — will it ever open?

Some of you may recognize this as the beginning of a Mervyn's commercial, but let's get to the real subject of this narrative.

I'm fat and I'm lazy, it's been a long winter. But just as a bear comes out of hibernation in the spring, so I, too, take on a new look. It's time to shed those pounds and trim the fat. But where's the gym I have been paying for for the last few years? Wasn't it supposed to open Feb. 11?

Who cares if the outdoor pool is 4 inches short, or if a steel beam is placed in the middle of the roll-up door. Minor details have delayed our enjoyment of such a fantastic gymnasium. I wonder if we are all getting a rebate back from liquidated damages incurred from the delay in completion? I could live with that.

Can someone up there tell us when the students of Cal Poly will get to step away from the windows and cease their chants of "OPEN, OPEN, OPEN...?"

I want my gym!

Concerts hopes Kershaw helps even its record

By Todd Hogan
Staff Writer

When rising country music star Sammy Kershaw took the stage in Mustang Stadium last night, ASI Concerts was attempting what one official called a "near impossibility" — breaking even.

But the odds — and history — were against them.

"There's an assumption that when you put on a show, you simply hire an artist, sell tickets and naturally break even," said ASI Executive Director Roger Conway. "But that's not the way the industry operates."

ASI Concerts, a division of the ASI Program Board, is a group of student volunteers whose motto and function is to provide "quality entertainment to the masses," said Tim McWilliams, ASI Concerts committee chair.

"We try to bring cultural, intellectually stimulating and purely entertaining events to the campus for the benefit of students," McWilliams said. "We want to enhance the whole college experience by providing an array of entertainment opportunities."

Bringing entertainment to campus, however, involves money — and risk.

Since 1988, ASI Concerts has sponsored 18 shows, 15 of which lost money. In May 1991, a Bob Hope show in Mustang Stadium lost nearly $35,000.

That loss, however, was offset somewhat by a March concert featuring the hard rock of Living Colour. That Mott Gym concert netted nearly $11,000 in profits.

This year, McWilliams hopes to end ASI Concerts' losing track record. An October, 1992 show in Chumash Auditorium featuring Toad the Wet Sprocket made just over $3,000. But a January Faith No More show in Mott Gym lost $10,000.

"It's almost impossible — without subsidies — for a college campus to break even sponsoring concerts," Conway said. "That's the reality of the market."

ASI body tries to cut their losses in challenging industry

At most college campuses, the average subsidy from the student body for concert promotions is between $70,000 and $100,000 per year, Conway said.

ASI Concerts' annual subsidy is $1,600, according to McWilliams.

"The fact is, most college campuses are highly subsidized," Conway said. "Some campuses are able to break even, but those schools usually have large halls available and are located in a densely populated area to fill it."

Roger Conway
ASI Executive Director

Typically, Conway said, larger schools with the necessary facilities succeed in concert promotion while medium-sized schools struggle and smaller schools generally lose.

Sometimes the smaller schools get lucky, Conway said, if they can hit a rising star in a small venue and make money. Toad the Wet Sprocket in Chumash Auditorium is a perfect example, he said.

But most of the time, predicting a successful concert is "like going to the racetrack," Conway said.

With the minimal subsidy granted to ASI Concerts, their very survival "defies the odds," said Erica Brown, chair of the ASI Special Projects committee. Brown also heads the Program Board Oversight committee, an ASI task force which reports to the Board of Directors on the efficiency of Program Board activities.

"Their ability to sponsor shows with nearly no subsidy from the students and function successfully with only an all-volunteer staff is amazing," Brown said.

ASI Concerts is one facet of the much larger Program Board, which consists of the Cultural Advisory Committee, Speakers Forum, Special Events and Films, Fine Arts and Concerts.

The Program Board's function, according to Brown, is to provide social, entertainment, educational, cultural and recreational avenues for students.

"College is not just going to class," Brown said. "Someone needs to offer other forums of activities outside the classroom. The university isn't doing it, so we need to."

Providing cultural and entertainment avenues, however, costs money — something Program Board doesn't have a lot of. In fact, Cal Poly has the second-lowest-funded Program Board in the country, at $26,000 a year, Brown said.

The average funding for a university's program board is about $110,000 annually, she said.

Ultimately, however, the success and future of ASI Concerts, and the Program Board in general, depends on the students.

"Students decide what they want and what they don't want," Conway said. "Many campuses have a mandatory $2 fee per quarter or semester that generates money for concerts and the Program Board. In essence, they've decided they want concerts and they have taxed themselves for it."

But the success of ASI Concerts may depend also on geographic limitations. And enough to make money sponsoring concerts."

In that case, evaluations and revisions to the program may be necessary, focusing on fewer or smaller shows, Conway said.

In the meantime, Program Board is waiting anxiously to see if Sammy Kershaw can pull them through.

"People are nervous," Brown said. "If the show does well, we will all breathe a sigh of relief. If not, we'll have to ask ourselves what it's going to take to break even."

Editor's note: The above story is a slightly modified version of the original, which appeared in Friday's Daily. Due to production errors, that story was misstructured.

business community pick up the tab for out-of-town police officers who could assist Cal Poly police if the situation happened again.

But other businesspeople, joined by San Luis Obispo Police Chief Jim Gardiner, don't think this should be an issue.

"I don't think you should have to have extra police," Kiff said. "I think it can be done correctly, and I think it can be better managed. I don't think the businessman should be expected to pay for it."

Gardiner said any proposals earning his approval would modify the concept of Poly Royal significantly, building in deterrents to situations that might require police intervention.

Referring to the recent proposal for a "Cal Poly Open House," Gardiner said: "What we're talking about is something very similar to the open house that (several different colleges within the university) have got now. The only difference in the current proposal would be to bring the departments together."

Endorsement of the new plan comes from City Council members as well. San Luis Obispo City Council member and political science professor Allen Settle said he doesn't think the problems of the past forbode disasters for a revived open house.

The main condition, he emphasized, would be that this is a return to the original academic purpose of Poly Royal, as opposed to the alcoholic focus the event gained in its later years.

Settle said he felt ignoring the new proposal would be the worst course of action. "I would rather take the chance and err on the side of proceeding with this," he said.

Despite its explosive climax, suggestions that it be reinstated have met with cheers — albeit a little reserved — from the unlikely quarters.

Arlene Zanchuck, a member of the board of directors for Residents for Quality Neighborhoods (RQN), watched the 1990 riots through her windows. Zanchuck expressed a positive interest in the new plans for an open house.

"Personally, I think there should be something brought back to our community," she said. "The Poly Royals that I remember were wonderful."

She said if the focus is kept on Poly, not Party, none of the former problems should arise. She also said she felt police would be better prepared to handle problems.

"I feel that our local and Cal Poly law enforcement people will be much more alert from the very beginning," she said.

Gardiner concurred.

"We'd be doing everything we could in a (preventive) sense," he said. "If we started to see any problem at all, we would deal with it immediately."

dents, and those living in his neighborhood "have been very gracious and accommodating."

Walt Lambert, who coordinates Greek Affairs at Cal Poly, said there is "excellent feedback from the community" during Good Neighbor Day.

Many community members "wait all year long for this event," he said.

"Students always come back with a smile on their face," Lambert said. "They come back feeling proud that they helped the community."

BASEBALL

ter Phil James hit a sacrifice fly to centerfield.

In the top of the ninth in a game scheduled for seven innings, Jake Fegan tore into a Mollahan pitch and sent it out of the park for a three run shot.

Down 5-2, the Mustangs rallied back. James led off the inning with a bunt single and reached third on a Golden Eagle throwing error following Duke Dodder's grounder.

Rob Neal proceeded to tag a triple, bringing home two runs for his 43rd and 44th RBIs. Munger followed with a triple down the third base line to tie the score at 5-5.

Higbee hit a chopper to right and beat out a throw to first as Munger sprinted across the plate for the winning run.

The Mustangs next face Cal Lutheran at SLO Stadium Tuesday. They then take on Cal State Dominguez Hills in a weekend home series beginning Friday night.

I want to be a cowboy

As in the welcoming words of the Cal Poly Rodeo announcer: "Howdy do to you."

• Saturday and Sunday's rodeo featured the state's top cowboys and cowgirls, while the stands were packed with fans.
• Had to wonder, though, how much more crowded the bleachers might have been if it was Poly Royal weekend, which used to be when the spring rodeo took place.

• I can't speak for all the Wrangler watchers but my day was crushed Sunday when Sammy Kershaw failed to show for the national anthem because he missed his flight from Los Angeles.

• Most perplexing comment on the day: "She didn't have enough dip in the loop." Translated: She failed to rope the calf.

• Our friendly announcer reminded fans that rodeo is the most family-watched American sport.

• Of course I'd rather see a bull buck than an archer aim.

• Across the pasture from the rodeo arena, Cal Poly's softball team played its home finale.

• Not to be confused with the sounds of screaming bareback riders in the arena, here's the yelp Mustang hurler Tricia Waayers lets out before each pitch: "Hah knee-ahhh!!!"

• It may have been the last home game for the softball team, but Cal Poly's first-place baseball team will be home for its next eight games.

• With the sweep over Cal State Los Angeles, Cal Poly is now 13-4 in the friendly confines of SLO Stadium.

• It was déjà vu all over again in Saturday's nightcap when the Mustangs rallied in the ninth to take the come-from-behind win. In the second game of an April 10 twinbill with Riverside, Cal Poly won in the bottom of the ninth.

• Prepare to say goodbye to Cal Poly's all-time win leaders. Baseball's Dan Chergey and softball's Julie Rome are both seniors, and both have won more games in their sport than any previous Mustang pitcher.

• At the U.S. Olympic Volleyball Festival Tryouts April 16-20, Cal Poly volleyball players Jennifer Kaylor and Meygan Androvich passed through two cuts and advanced with 19 others to squad candidacy. Final selections will be announced in June.

• More volleyball news: Mustang head coach Craig Cummings will serve as an assistant coach on the South national team.

• Anyone wanting to talk Mustang football can do so May 10 at Brubeck's Restaurant, where a luncheon featuring coaches and players will be held and open to the public. Cost is $5.95.

• If football coach Lyle Setencich is in need of another defensive tackle, he should talk with Mustang outfielder Ben Boulware, who barreled into Cal State L.A.'s catcher with such might that he was kicked out in the bottom of the second inning in Saturday's opener.

Cal Poly freshman Jon Macalutas dives back to first base in Saturday's doubleheader sweep of Cal State Los Angeles. Poly won 6-4 and 6-5.

Sweep sends Poly into first place

By Brad Hamilton
Senior Staff Writer

By completing a three-game sweep over Cal State Los Angeles Saturday, the Cal Poly baseball team now sits atop the California Collegiate Athletic Association.

The No. 12 ranked Mustangs defeated the Golden Eagles 10-5 Friday night and 6-4, 6-5 in Saturday's twinbill at SLO Stadium.

The three wins capped a season sweep of the Golden Eagles, and improved Cal Poly's record to 12-8 in CCAA and 25-14 overall.

The Golden Eagles (6-14, 14-26) have not beaten the Mustangs in two years and have never taken a series from the Mustangs since 10th-year coach Steve McFarland took the reigns.

The Mustangs entered the weekend sitting in third in the CCAA, but UC Riverside (11-9, 19-23) took two out of three from previous CCAA leader Cal Poly Pomona (12-10, 25-19), elevating the Mustangs into first place with a one game lead over the Highlanders.

McFarland said the Mustangs needed the sweep to snap the team's three-game losing skid — the longest losing streak of the year.

"We just have to keep winning and the (CCAA race) will take care of itself," McFarland said. "Everyone absorbs losses, and everyone is capable of beating anyone else."

Dan Chergey's complete-game win Friday night set the tone for Saturday's house-cleaning party. The complete game was his fourth in five games and 24th in his career, which puts him one shy of Bruce Freeberg's school record.

Chergey (8-1) allowed five runs in the opening frame via four hits, three wild pitches and a walk.

"I just didn't seem to get loose (before the game)," Chergey said. "I got into a groove after the first inning and ended up throwing pitches where I wanted for strikes."

Chergey finished the night allowing nine hits, seven strikeouts and two walks.

Jon Macalutas went 4 for 4 with three singles and a triple, extending his hitting streak to eight consecutive at-bats.

In the first game on Saturday, Paul Souza recorded the victory to improve his record to 6-5 while Shannon Stephens came on in the ninth and got a doubleplay to end the game.

The Mustangs led throughout the opener after getting off to a quick 4-0 start in the first inning with three consecutive doubles.

Munger made it 5-0 in the third inning with his third home run of the season.

In the eighth inning and the score 6-3, Golden Eagle right fielder Ted Stevens, the starting pitcher in Friday's contest, homered to make the final score 6-4.

The new third man in the Mustang rotation, Scott Molahan, was tagged for a run in the first another run in the third, giving Cal State Los Angeles a 2-1 lead until the sixth inning.

In the sixth, designated hitter Jeff Higbee led off with a walk, was sacrificed to third and crossed the plate when pinch hit-

Loss costly for Mustangs Sunday split puts pressure on Poly

By Chris Brandi
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly softball team split its final two home games with UC Riverside on Sunday, topping the Highlanders 9-1 in the opener and losing 6-3 in the second game.

For the Mustangs, the loss makes the California Collegiate Athletic Association finals on May 7th and 8th very important.

"Our losses last week to Bakersfield really hurt," coach Lisa Boyer said. "The conference finals are going to be big for us."

The first game turned into a rout for the Mustang softballers (14-6 in CCAA, 26-15 overall).

Freshman infielder Cindy Barnett hit an inside the park grand slam in the fifth inning to blow the game open.

Pitcher Tricia Waayers, who pitched a solid two hitter, was happy with her performance and the way her season has progressed.

"Everything is coming together for me," Waayers said. "In the first half of the season, they (the umpires) were calling me for crow-hopping but now I have my speed back up and things are going well."

Second baseman Christy Panches went 3-for-4 with 2 RBI's.

Game two saw the Mustangs fall behind early. Pitcher Julie Rome was hit hard in her 3 1/3 innings of work. Ruth Henry came in to relieve Rome and pitched well, allowing only one more run.

But the Highlanders early lead proved to be enough as they dropping Rome's record to 12-8.

Marlo Aubert, a senior playing in her final home game went 3-for-3 and scored a run. Rhonda Gavert, also in her final home game, went 3-for-4 and scored a run.

The Mustangs had twelve hits in the second game and could not capitalize on a last inning rally.

Saturday, Cal Poly swept Cal State San Bernardino in a doubleheader.

Julie Rome threw her second no-hitter of the year in Cal Poly's 10-0 win in the opener, and Panches spanked a three-run homer in seventh inning of the nightcap to lift the Mustangs to a 5-2 win.

Bulldogs top Poly in track

By Kevin Comerford
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly men's and women's track and field teams traveled to Fresno this weekend to square off against UC Davis and Fresno State.

The Bulldogs left little question about who was the dominate team, as they demolished both Cal Poly and UC Davis, almost doubling their score in both the men's and women's competition.

The Cal Poly men finished third, scoring a meager 33 points. UC Davis placed second with 54 points, well behind Fresno State's 107.

In the women's meet, Fresno won with 103 points, followed by Cal Poly (38) and Davis (29).

Some of the individual standouts for Cal Poly were highlighted in the 1,500-meter run. Coley Candaele and Kevin Berkowitz finished first and second, with Candaele's winning time at 3:51.71.

In the pole vault competition, Mustang Brian Adamick cleared the bar at 17-4 1/2, vaulting five inches higher than his nearest competitor.

The men's high jump saw the duo of Gabe Manville and Aaron Maddieux finish second and third respectively for the Mustangs.

In women's individual events, Allison Eilerts cruised to an easy victory in the javelin throw and Kelly Flather placed first in the 3,000-meter run.

In the 1,600-meter relay, Cal Poly's team of Dina Moore, Lori Linker, Kerri Gabrielson and Gabby McKenzie edged a Fresno State team by less than a second.
